

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

DISTRICT OF NEVADA

BANK OF AMERICA, N.A.,

Case No.: 2:16-cv-01692-APG-GWF

Plaintiff

Order Granting in Part the Motion to Dismiss

V.

[ECF No. 31]

OPERTURE, INC., et al.,

Defendants

This is a dispute over the effect of a non-judicial foreclosure sale conducted by defendant Indigo Homeowners' Association (Indigo). Indigo foreclosed on the property located at 9268 Lapeer Street in Las Vegas after the former homeowner ceased paying homeowners association (HOA) assessments. Plaintiff Bank of America, N.A. sues to determine whether the HOA foreclosure sale extinguished Bank of America's deed of trust encumbering the property.

Indigo moves to dismiss the claims against it for quiet title, unjust enrichment, wrongful foreclosure, negligence, negligence per se, breach of contract, misrepresentation, and tortious interference with contract.¹ I grant the motion in part.

I. ANALYSIS

In considering a motion to dismiss, “all well-pleaded allegations of material fact are taken as true and construed in a light most favorable to the non-moving party.” Wyler Summit P’ship v. Turner Broad. Sys., Inc., 135 F.3d 658, 661 (9th Cir. 1998). However, I do not necessarily assume the truth of legal conclusions merely because they are cast in the form of factual

1 allegations in the complaint. See Clegg v. Cult Awareness Network, 18 F.3d 752, 754-55 (9th
2 Cir. 1994). A plaintiff must make sufficient factual allegations to establish a plausible
3 entitlement to relief. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556 (2007). Such allegations 4 must amount to “more than labels and conclusions, [or] a formulaic recitation of the elements of 5 a cause of action.” Id. at 555.

6 A. Quiet Title

7 Indigo moves to dismiss the quiet title claim, arguing Bank of America did not pay all 8 debts owed on the property, Bank of America cannot prove good title in itself because it is only a 9 lienholder, and Indigo does not assert an adverse claim to the property. Bank of America 10 responds that it need not pay all debts on the property to establish its lien priority. It also argues 11 it has adequately alleged a claim to determine adverse interests in property.

12 Under Nevada Revised Statutes § 40.010, an “action may be brought by any person 13 against another who claims an estate or interest in real property, adverse to the person bringing 14 the action, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim.” “Thus, any person claiming an 15 interest in the property may seek to determine adverse claims, even if that person does not have 16 title to or possession of the property.” Nationstar Mortg. LLC v. Amber Hills II Homeowners 17 Ass’n, No. 2:15-cv-01433-APG-CWH, 2016 WL 1298108, at *3 (D. Nev. Mar. 31, 2016).
18 Accordingly, it is not fatal to Bank of America’s claim that it asserts a lien interest rather than 19 title to the property.

20 Additionally, Indigo is a proper party to the quiet title claim.² Bank of America 21 challenges the validity of the sale Indigo conducted and the corresponding validity of the title 22

23 ² The complaint does not assert the quiet title claim against Indigo. See ECF No. 33 at 10.
However, because the parties act as if the claim was asserted against Indigo and the complaint

1 Indigo transferred to the purchaser at the HOA sale. If the HOA foreclosure sale is invalidated, 2 Indigo's superpriority lien might be reinstated as an encumbrance against the property. Further,
3 the existence and priority of that lien might still be in doubt where Bank of America alleges it 4 tendered payment of that lien. "The disposition of this action in the HOA's absence may impair 5 or impede [Bank of America's] ability to protect its interests." U.S. Bank, N.A. v. Ascente
6 Homeowners Ass'n, No. 2:15-cv-00302-JAD-VCF, 2015 WL 8780157, at *2 (D. Nev. Dec. 15, 7 2015). Additionally, if Bank of America "succeeds in invalidating the sale without the HOA 8 being a party to this suit, separate litigation to further settle the priority of the parties' respective 9 liens and rights may be necessary." Id. Thus, if Indigo is dismissed as a party, Bank of America 10 would not be able to secure the complete relief it seeks. See id.; Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

11 Accordingly, Indigo is a proper party to Bank of America's quiet title claim, and its motion to 12 dismiss on this basis is denied.

13 Finally, Bank of America is not required to pay all debts on the property to determine 14 whether its lien was extinguished. The case Indigo cites, Nebab v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. 2:10-15 cv-01865-KJD-GWF, 2012 WL 2860660 (D. Nev. July 11, 2012), relies on a California case, 16 Ferguson v. Avelo Mortg., LLC, 126 Cal. Rptr. 3d 586, 591 (Cal. Ct. App. 2011).³ Ferguson, in 17 turn, relies on another California case stating that a "mortgagor cannot quiet his title against the 18 mortgagee without paying the debt secured." Shimpones v. Stickney, 28 P.2d 673, 678 (Cal.
19 1934). These cases have no application here because Bank of America is not the mortgagor 20 trying to quiet title against the mortgagee. I therefore deny the motion to dismiss on that basis.

21 _____
22 alleges the HOA sale was void and seeks a declaration the sale was invalid, I will consider the 23 parties' arguments.

³ The California Supreme Court ordered Ferguson be depublished. See Ferguson v. Avelo Mortg., LLC, 2011 Cal. LEXIS 9825 (Cal. Sept. 14, 2011); see also Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.1115 (allowing California Supreme Court to order an opinion depublished).

1 B. Common Law Claims

2 Indigo argues that Bank of America’s common law claims for wrongful foreclosure, 3 unjust enrichment, and negligence have been superseded by the comprehensive statutory scheme 4 set forth in Nevada Revised Statutes Chapter 116. Bank of America responds that Supreme 5 Court of Nevada authority establishes that common law claims are not statutorily superseded by 6 Chapter 116.

7 By statute, Nevada follows the “common law of England, so far as it is not repugnant to 8 or in conflict with the . . . laws of this State.” Nev. Rev. Stat. § 1.030; see also State v. Hamilton, 9 111 P. 1026, 1029 (Nev. 1910) (stating Nevada adopts the common law “except as specially 10 abrogated or where unsuitable to our conditions”). Chapter 116, although comprehensive, does 11 not reflect an intent to supersede all common law causes of action. To the contrary, § 116.1108
12 reflects that the common law remains applicable to Chapter 116 unless the two conflict:

13 The principles of law and equity, including the law of corporations 14 and any other form of organization authorized by law of this State, 15 the law of unincorporated associations, the law of real property, 16 and the law relative to capacity to contract, principal and agent, 17 eminent domain, estoppel, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, 18 coercion, mistake, receivership, substantial performance, or other 19 validating or invalidating cause supplement the provisions of this 20 chapter, except to the extent inconsistent with this chapter.

21 I therefore deny the motion to dismiss on this basis.

22 C. Wrongful Foreclosure

23 Alternatively, Indigo argues the wrongful foreclosure claim must be dismissed because the prior homeowner was in default at the time of the HOA foreclosure sale. Indigo also argues that a lienholder like Bank of America cannot assert a wrongful foreclosure claim because that claim belongs only to the trustor or mortgagor. Bank of America responds that there is no law

1 requiring a lienholder to show the homeowner was not in default to assert a wrongful foreclosure
2 claim against an HOA. Bank of America asserts that its claim is validly based on Indigo's 3 violations of various provisions of Chapter 116.

4 A tortious wrongful foreclosure claim "challenges the authority behind the foreclosure, 5 not the foreclosure act itself." McKnight Family, L.L.P. v. Adept Mgmt., 310 P.3d 555, 559 (Nev.
6 2013) (en banc). While such a claim usually will be brought by the trustor or mortgagor, Indigo 7 cites no authority for the proposition that only a trustor or mortgagor has standing to assert a 8 wrongful foreclosure claim. Because a junior lienholder like Bank of America has an interest in 9 preventing a wrongful foreclosure that would extinguish its security interest, it has standing to 10 assert a wrongful foreclosure claim.

11 Ordinarily, a wrongful foreclosure requires showing "that at the time the power of sale 12 was exercised or the foreclosure occurred, no breach of condition or failure of performance 13 existed on the mortgagor's or trustor's part which would have authorized the foreclosure or 14 exercise of the power of sale." Collins v. Union Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 662 P.2d 610, 623 15 (Nev. 1983). The Supreme Court of Nevada has not decided whether lienholders like Bank of 16 America must prove non-breach and performance. I predict⁴ the Supreme Court of Nevada 17 would not require such a showing from a junior lienholder where the basis for the wrongful 18 foreclosure claim is independent of whether the homeowner was in default on the HOA 19 assessments. Here, Bank of America asserts the foreclosure was wrongful regardless of whether 20 the prior owner was in default on his HOA assessments.

22 ⁴ In interpreting Nevada law, I am bound by the pronouncements of the Supreme Court of 23 Nevada. If that court has not addressed the particular issue before me, I "must predict how the state's highest court would resolve it." Hemmings v. Tidyman's Inc., 285 F.3d 1174, 1203 (9th Cir. 2002).

Moreover, Bank of America alleges that it paid the superpriority amount. ECF No. 66 at 4. This is an allegation that the superpriority lien was not in default at the time of the HOA foreclosure sale, so the HOA could not have foreclosed on the superpriority lien. Accepting Bank of America's allegations as true, there was a remaining non-superpriority lien that Indigo foreclosed on after Bank of America paid the superpriority amount. Id. at 4-5. However, foreclosure on a subpriority lien would not extinguish Bank of America's deed of trust. Thus, Bank of America is asserting the foreclosure was wrongful if it extinguishes the deed of trust even though the superpriority lien was satisfied (and thus there was no breach as to the superpriority amount) prior to the sale. Bank of America therefore has pleaded sufficient facts to state a wrongful foreclosure claim even if it has to allege lack of a breach. See Bank of Am., N.A. v. S. Valley Ranch Cmty. Ass'n, No. 2:16-cv-01013-KJD-CWH, 2016 WL 4168733, at *4 (D. Nev. Aug. 4, 2016).

D. Negligence and Negligence Per Se

Indigo argues the negligence claims must be dismissed because Indigo owed no duty to Bank of America and because the economic loss doctrine bars the claims. Indigo also argues that because the foreclosure statute is designed to protect the general public and not a particular class of persons, it cannot support a negligence per se claim. Bank of America responds that Indigo had a duty to conduct the foreclosure in compliance with Chapter 116. Bank of America contends it adequately alleged Indigo breached that duty when Indigo failed to announce that the superpriority lien was satisfied before the sale, did not comply with the statutory notice provisions, and improperly included collection costs in the lien. Bank of America contends the economic loss doctrine does not apply because Indigo owes it duties arising independent of any contract.

1 1. Negligence Per Se

2 Bank of America did not respond to Indigo’s motion regarding the negligence per se 3 allegations. I therefore grant the motion to dismiss these allegations as unopposed. LR 7-2(d).

4 2. Economic Loss Doctrine

5 Under Nevada law, the “economic loss doctrine is a rule of judicial creation” that “marks 6 the fundamental boundary between contract law, which is designed to enforce the expectancy 7 interests of the parties, and tort law, which imposes a duty of reasonable care and thereby 8 [generally] encourages citizens to avoid causing physical harm to others.” Davis v. Beling, 278
9 P.3d 501, 514 (Nev. 2012) (quotation omitted). The doctrine generally prohibits unintentional 10 tort actions in which the plaintiff seeks to recover purely economic losses. Terracon Consultants 11 W., Inc. v. Mandalay Resort Group, 206 P.3d 81, 86 (Nev. 2009) (en banc). Absent “personal 12 injury or property damage, a plaintiff may not recover in negligence for economic losses,” unless 13 an exception applies. Id. at 87.

14 Determining whether the doctrine applies is a two-step process. First, I determine 15 “whether the damages are purely economic in nature.” Id. at 86. Second, I determine whether 16 the claim at issue falls within the economic loss doctrine’s scope by reference to the policy 17 behind the doctrine and its recognized exceptions. Id.

18 Bank of America’s losses are purely economic. Purely economic loss means “the loss of 19 the benefit of the user’s bargain . . . including . . . pecuniary damage for inadequate value, the 20 cost of repair and replacement of the defective product, or consequent loss of profits, without any 21 claim of personal injury or damage to other property.” Calloway v. City of Reno, 993 P.2d 1259,

22 ////

1 1263 (Nev. 2000) (quotation omitted).⁵ Bank of America seeks as damages “the fair market
2 value of the Property or the unpaid balance of the . . . Loan and . . . Deed of Trust . . .” ECF No.
3 66 at 20. Bank of America thus seeks essentially replacement costs or lost profits without any 4 personal injury or property damage. Bank of America contends it suffered something beyond 5 economic losses because it lost its security interest in a particular parcel of property and real 6 property is unique. But Bank of America would not obtain the property if it prevailed on its 7 negligence claim. It would be entitled only to damages against Indigo. Additionally, having a 8 lien extinguished is not property damage within the doctrine’s meaning because it is not physical 9 damage to property.

10 Bank of America’s claim falls within the doctrine’s scope and no exception applies.
11 “The doctrine expresses the policy that the need for useful commercial economic activity and the 12 desire to make injured plaintiffs whole is best balanced by allowing tort recovery only to those 13 plaintiffs who have suffered personal injury or property damage.” Terracon Consultants W., Inc., 14 206 P.3d at 87. It is “driven by financial considerations,” and “works to reduce the cost of tort 15 actions, but still provides tort victims with a remedy because less expensive alternative forms of 16 compensation, such as insurance, generally are available to a financially injured party.” Id. at 88.

17 The doctrine also seeks to balance “the disproportion between liability and fault.” Id.
18 “[C]utting off tort liability at the point where only economic loss is at stake without 19 accompanying physical injury or property damage provides . . . incentives and disincentives to 20 engage in economic activity or to make it safer.” Id. (quotation omitted). “On the other hand, 21 imposing unbounded tort liability for pure financial harm could result in incentives that are 22

23 ⁵ Calloway was superseded in part by statute in relation to construction defect negligence claims brought under Nevada Revised Statutes Chapter 40. See Olson v. Richard, 89 P.3d 31, 33
(Nev. 2004). That statute does not apply here.

1 perverse, such as insurance premiums that are too expensive for the average economic actor to 2 afford.” Id. (quotation omitted).

3 There are exceptions to the doctrine, such as where “policy concerns about administrative 4 costs and a disproportionate balance between liability and fault are insignificant, or other 5 countervailing considerations weigh in favor of liability.” Id. “For example, negligent 6 misrepresentation is a special financial harm claim for which tort recovery is permitted because 7 without such liability the law would not exert significant financial pressures to avoid such 8 negligence.” Id. at 76-77.

9 Here, less expensive alternative forms of compensation, such as insurance, generally are 10 available to lenders like Bank of America. Additionally, Bank of America has other means to 11 protect itself financially, including this quiet title action against the subsequent purchaser. If 12 Bank of America is able to show the HOA acted improperly in conducting the sale, then the sale 13 may be voided and the deed of trust reinstated. Moreover, lenders have many other steps they 14 can take to protect themselves before HOA foreclosure sales take place. See SFR Investments
15 Pool 1 v. U.S. Bank, 334 P.3d 408, 413-14 (Nev. 2014) (en banc) (stating junior lienholders 16 “could have paid off the [HOA] lien to avert loss of its security” or “could have established an 17 escrow for [HOA] assessments to avoid having to use its own funds to pay delinquent dues”);
18 Nationstar Mortg. LLC v. Amber Hills II Homeowners Ass’n, No. 2:15-cv-01433-APG-CWH, 19 2016 WL 1298108, at *8 (D. Nev. Mar. 31, 2016) (identifying additional options such as 20 attending the sale and purchasing the property or suing the HOA to require it to accept payment 21 in satisfaction of the superpriority lien).

22 ////

1 Imposing tort liability against an HOA in these circumstances would be a tremendous 2 disincentive to HOAs conducting foreclosures. The HOA can hope to obtain only a few 3 thousand (sometimes only a few hundred) dollars by enforcing its lien through foreclosure. But 4 if the HOA is negligent in conducting the sale, it faces tens or hundreds of thousands of dollars
5 in liability from the lender whose deed of trust is extinguished. HOAs likely would cease 6 conducting foreclosure sales if faced with that kind of liability, and that would be contrary to the 7 purpose behind Nevada’s law providing a mechanism for HOAs to obtain payment for past due 8 assessments through foreclosure. As the Supreme Court of Nevada has explained, “[a]n HOA’s 9 sources of revenues are usually limited to common assessments.” SFR Investments Pool 1, 334
10 P.3d at 413 (quotation omitted). “This makes an HOA’s ability to foreclose on the unpaid dues 11 portion of its lien essential for common-interest communities.” Id. at 414. “Otherwise, when a 12 homeowner walks away from the property and the first deed of trust holder delays foreclosure, 13 the HOA has to either increase the assessment burden on the remaining unit/parcel owners or 14 reduce the services the association provides (e.g., by deferring maintenance on common 15 amenities).” Id. (quotation omitted). The superpriority lien thus was intended to “avoid having 16 the community subsidize first security holders who delay foreclosure, whether strategically or for 17 some other reason.” Id. That purpose will be undermined if HOAs cease conducting foreclosures 18 out of fear of disproportionate liability.

19 There is no need to create an exception to the economic loss doctrine to incentivize 20 HOAs to perform their foreclosure sales properly. An HOA who does not conduct a sale 21 properly faces the prospect of the sale being unwound through a quiet title action, resulting in 22 increased litigation and foreclosure expenses the HOA can ill afford. No “strong countervailing 23 ////

1 considerations weigh in favor of imposing liability” against HOAs for negligently performing 2 foreclosure sales. Terracon Consultants W., Inc., 206 P.3d at 86.

3 In sum, Bank of America seeks purely economic losses, its negligence claim falls within 4 the economic loss doctrine’s scope, and there is no need to carve out an exception to the doctrine 5 in these circumstances. I therefore grant Indigo’s motion to dismiss the negligence claim.

6 E. Contract and Misrepresentation Claims

7 Indigo argues the contract and misrepresentation claims must be dismissed because there 8 was no contract between Indigo and Bank of America or between Indigo and the prior 9 homeowner. Indigo further argues that even if the Covenants, Conditions, and Restrictions 10 (CC&Rs) constitute a contract to which Bank of America is a third party beneficiary, Bank of 11 America cannot rely on the mortgage protection clause because it conflicts with Nevada Revised 12 Statutes § 116.1104. Bank of America responds that it is a third party beneficiary of the CC&Rs, 13 which is a contract between the property owners in the community. Bank of America contends 14 that an HOA can adopt a mortgage protection clause without that clause being invalidated by 15 § 116.1104.

16 Bank of America’s contract and misrepresentation claims are based on section 8.16 of 17 Indigo’s CC&Rs. ECF No. 66 at 8, 16. That section states:

18 Breach of any of the covenants in this Article VIII shall not defeat 19 or render invalid the lien of any First Security Interest made in 20 good faith and for value as to said Lots or Property, or any part 21 thereof, but such provisions, restrictions, or covenants shall be 22 binding and effective against any Owner whose title thereto is 23 acquired by foreclosure, Trustee’s sale or otherwise.

1 ECF No.66-11 at 32. Article VIII however, makes no reference to HOA assessments. Id. at 30-2 33. Assessments are covered by Article IV of the CC&Rs. Id. at 19-23. Section 4.12
3 specifically preserves the HOA’s superpriority lien over a first deed of trust. Id. at 22.

4 Further, the Supreme Court of Nevada has already ruled that an HOA cannot waive its 5 right to a superpriority lien. RLP-Vervain Court, LLC v. Wells Fargo, No. 65255, 2014 WL
6 6889625, at *1 (Nev. Dec. 5, 2014) (“[A]n association may not waive its right to a priority 7 position for the association’s superpriority lien.”); SFR Investments Pool I, 334 P.3d at 418-19.
8 I decline Bank of America’s invitation to ignore that court’s binding interpretation of Nevada 9 law. I therefore dismiss the contract and misrepresentation claims with prejudice.

10 F. Unjust Enrichment

11 Indigo argues the unjust enrichment claim should be dismissed because Indigo does not 12 own the property, so Bank of America’s voluntary payment of taxes, insurance, and association 13 assessments since the foreclosure sale have not unjustly enriched Indigo. Bank of America 14 responds that it has alleged Indigo retained more than the superpriority amount following the 15 sale, even though items like collection costs were junior to Bank of America’s deed of trust.

16 “[U]njust enrichment occurs whenever a person has and retains a benefit which in equity 17 and good conscience belongs to another.” Coury v. Robison, 976 P.2d 518, 521 (Nev. 1999) (en 18 banc) (quotation omitted). In the section of the complaint entitled “unjust enrichment,” Bank of 19 America does not allege that Indigo retained proceeds from the HOA sale that belong to Bank of 20 America. Reading the complaint as a whole, Bank of America alleges elsewhere that it paid 21 $5,616.31 to pay off the superpriority lien, that Indigo sold the property for $16,500, and that the 22 deed upon sale identified the amount of the unpaid debt owed to Indigo as $1,952. ECF No. 66 at 23 4-5. But Bank of America does not allege the correct amount of the superpriority lien or the total

1 proceeds Indigo retained. Thus, the complaint does not plausibly allege Indigo retained money
2 that in equity and in good conscience belongs to Bank of America.

3 Bank of America also alleges that if the deed of trust was extinguished by the HOA sale, 4 then Indigo has been unjustly enriched because Bank of America has been paying taxes, 5 insurance, and HOA assessments on the property since the HOA sale. Bank of America does not 6 explain how Indigo is unjustly enriched by any of these payments. I therefore grant the motion 7 to dismiss the unjust enrichment claim, with leave to amend.

8 F. Tortious Interference

9 Indigo argues the tortious interference claim should be dismissed because there are no 10 allegations that Indigo knew of Bank of America's contract with the prior homeowner, that 11 Indigo caused the prior homeowner to stop making mortgage payments, or that Indigo intended 12 to disrupt that relationship. Bank of America did not respond to this claim. I therefore grant 13 Indigo's motion as unopposed as to this claim. See LR 7-2(d).

14 II. CONCLUSION

15 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that defendant Indigo Homeowners Association's 16 motion to dismiss (ECF No. 31) is GRANTED in part as more fully set forth in this order.

17 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that on or before July 17, 2018, Bank of America shall file 18 an amended complaint if it seeks to cure the deficiencies identified in this order.

19 DATED this 2nd day of July, 2018.
